It will be seen by our dispatches, this morning, that the Legislature of California has counties of that State upon condition that they are organized as the Ibrritory o Colorado, under the control, as now. the bill, to which we have before referred, are San Luis Obispe, Buena Vista, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles and San Diego They are bounded on the north by the 36th They are bounded on the north by the 20th parallel of latitude, on the south by the line of 32 deg, 36 min. They comprise a valuable and exceedingly fertile part of the State, and are, better than any other six counties, fisted for the employment of slave labor. That, organized as a Territory, the area thus described, will be exempt from the inhibition of Slavery in the Constitution of California, and come under the operation of the amendment of the Constitution of the United States, injected into that instrument by the States, injected into that instrument by the Dred Scott decision, and that, as a fine result, a new Slave State may by and by be ad mitted into the Union, is probably the hope the "Democracy" of California, who ha elaborated this scheme. Sonorm is soon, the programme of the Propaganda, to be take manoevare, is evident. But as Congress is to be consulted before this plan is fully each out, we take it that there are no present proba-bilities that any part of California will be de-voted to women whipping and forced amal-gamation.

Choice selections may now be made in diers grouped everywhere, with piled arms, waiting the signal to line the roads; people of every nation and language out waiting in thousands—most of them had been out all day. The weather was meensely hot, and an east wind blowing. It grew dark, however, and the Prince had not arrived, but at length the roar of the cannon salute announced that the royal visitor was at the Pacha's paylion, and immediately huge lanterns were dispatched from the English consulate to meet the procession at the city gate. The following reminiscences of Count Cavon the distinguished Prime Minister of Sardinia, at taken from a recent article in the Mt. land Monthly, written by Ruffini, the author of "Do tor Antonio."

"During the summer of 1845 I rented a couple of rooms in the Vis dell'Arcivescovade at Turin. There often fell upon my ear, wafted acroas the court from the windows opposite mine, a lond and regular declamation. I fancied it was a preacher learning by heart's sermon, or an action his particular that the serior his part. I was told one day that it was Count-Gavour, the owner of the house, who, as a prelude to his parlimentary career, was addressing an imaginary assembly. The fact streck me the more, as the Count was not a member of Parliament, at the time. He was elected a Deputy and took his seat not long after. I was present at his show! I twas not brilliant. Count Cavour was not born an orator, his delivery was far from fluent. He had many things to say, and wanted to say them all at once. The sense of the House was not favorable to the new member,—that of the public galleries still less so.—No man was less spouled by popularity than he. I have no other reason for mentioning the particulars than to put in relief the strength of will and the perseverance which one so situated must have brought to bear, in order to conquer his own deficiencies and the normal countries of the country. That Count Cavour has made himself, if not properly an erator, in the high sense of the word, a nervous, fluend, and most agreeable speaker, is sufficiently attested by the untiring attention with which his speeches, occupying sometimes two whole stitings, are listened to in both Houses. He never puts them in writing, and seldum, if ever, makes use of notes."
